Mystery at the Marshall-Yohe House

By Jyll Phillips,
Lincoln-Sentinel

The Lincoln County Historical Society sponsored an enchanted evening Saturday, October 5 when several locals witnessed ghosts, strange sounds and missing employees at the Marshall-Yohe House.

From the beginning they knew something was wrong when Mr. Ben Yohe met the visitors at the door. The lights were off and there was no electricity. How could someone host a cocktail party in the 1970s without electricity? A call was placed to the electrician who apparently also disappeared on the way to the house.

An ear-piercing scream shook the walls and rafters. Then the cook disappeared. People were waiting to be fed but there was no food because there was no cook! And where did that scream come from? Still trying to resolve these issues, two more staff members disappeared. The hostess was beside herself.

Still dealing with footsteps with no body, four-foot-tall ghosts taking liberties throughout the rooms and still no food, was almost too much for some. The ladies in their best cocktail dresses and a couple of hipsters in bell bottoms and fringe were beginning to ask a lot of questions.

Suddenly a man-sized dog entered the room with a very shaggy teenage boy. The hostess was happy to see them as they carried in pizza for the hungry guests.

The cook never did show up. The electricity seemed to somehow repair itself. Everyone had enough to eat, and all was well for the Mystery at the Marshall-Yohe House!

Guests at the Marshall-Yohe House sit in anticipation after a series of strange events on Saturday, October 5, during an enchanted evening sponsored by the Lincoln County Historical Society. From disappearing staff members to ghostly encounters, the evening kept locals on edge—until a shaggy teenage boy and his man-sized dog saved the day, delivering pizza just in time! (Courtesy photo)

Batchman named Herington Hero

RYAN BATCHMAN

Home Health and Hospice of Dickinson County in Herington, an affiliate of Memorial Health System in Abilene, has selected the next Herington Hero Award. Congratulations to Ryan Batchman.

The nomination had this to say about Ryan:

"Everyone in the school system knows Mr. B. He is the elementary school P.E. teacher and assists in coaching, football, track, and wrestling. He lights up a room every time he enters. He gives constant compliments that make you realize how amazing you are, and he is a faithful man of God. This will be his 3rd year here at the Herington schools. He is a volunteer firefighter and a Core Friend at Herington Hearts Core Community on Monday nights. Through Core Community, we are able to take youth to Colorado for two weeks each summer for a Youth Core Ministries Summer Camp. This is the second year that he took off work (his summer job as a lifeguard) to volunteer as a camp leader and help lead troubled kids to Jesus. He has found a church home here, has assisted with events in town, and is willing to help however he is needed as he now calls Herington home."

"Mr. B goes out of his way, every single day to make others feel seen, heard, and loved. He has "check-ins" with people via phone to make sure they are okay, and they feel supported. He spends a considerable amount of time, daily, praying for all those who come in contact with him. I wouldn't recommend challenging him in a pancake or hotdog eating contest because he will out-eat you, ha-ha! He has graciously accepted a leadership role in a youth program that Herington Hearts is hoping to bring to town in 2025 which will allow him to get closer to teens in our community who might not have a good role model and give these kids an opportunity to know Jesus."

"Ryan pushes everyone to be their best selves. Listening to his testimony of how God gave him a second chance is inspiring. He is a great role model for our youth and an excellent friend and supporter for those who know him. He is a great reminder that if we wake up each day with an "I get to" attitude instead of an "I have to" attitude no matter what comes our way, our day will still be better." – Chardy

"Mr. B is an okay guy! We have had great conversations about life, religion, history, and more. I've enjoyed knowing him as a teacher/coach at the school, but also as a co-worker at the pool in the summer. I am always learning from him." – Adrian

Columbus Day is October 12

Columbus Day is one of those holidays that come and go without much recognition. It became officially recognized as a federal holiday in 1971 and observed on the second Monday in October as commemorated by annual Presidential proclamation. Actual observance varies in various parts of the U.S. from large-scale parades and events to complete nonobservance. San Francisco claims the nation's oldest continuously existing celebration with the Italian-American community's annual Columbus Day Parade, which was established by Nicola Larco in 1868, while New York City boasts the largest, with over 35,000 marchers and one million viewers around 2010.

As in the mainland United States, Columbus Day is a legal holiday in the U.S. territory of Puerto Rico. In the United States Virgin Islands, the day is celebrated as both Columbus Day and "Puerto Rico Friendship Day."

Virginia also celebrates two legal holidays on the day, Columbus Day and Yorktown Victory Day, which honors the final victory at the Siege of Yorktown in the Revolutionary War. No matter how it is celebrated it's important to note that in 14-hundred-and-92 Columbus sailed the ocean blue.

KDHE reminds Kansans to be aware as Respiratory Virus Season approaches

The Kansas Department of Health and Environment (KDHE) would like to remind Kansans as we approach the respiratory virus season to remain aware of symptoms, preventative measures and when to seek medical treatment.

Every year, respiratory viruses such as influenza (flu), COVID-19, respiratory syncytial virus (RSV), and pneumococcal disease cause hundreds of thousands of hospitalizations and thousands of deaths during the fall and winter virus season. "We know the risk of contracting and spreading respiratory viruses will increase as we move into the fall and winter months," KDHE Chief Medical Officer Dr. Derek Totten said. "It is imperative that people follow common-sense preventative measures and consider getting a vaccine, especially if they fall into a high-risk category."

Getting an immunization is an important preventative measure against respiratory viruses. Vaccines are available for all three major fall and winter respiratory diseases - flu, COVID-19, and RSV (for groups eligible for RSV immunization). In addition, pneumococcal vaccines are recommended for children younger than five years, adults, 65 years and older, and individuals at an increased risk for pneumococcal disease.

Kansas will receive approximately $780,000 from the federal government this year to cover about 9,380

COVID-19 doses for uninsured and underinsured adults. These doses will be equitably distributed across Kansas to Local Health Departments, Federally Qualified Health Centers, Rural Health Clinics, and other vaccination locations to help provide vaccine coverage to uninsured and underinsured adults in Kansas.

While anyone can become sick from common respiratory viruses like COVID-19, flu, RSV, and pneumococcal disease, some individuals have risk factors that can increase their chances of getting a severe illness.

Groups of people at a higher risk for respiratory illnesses

- Older adults
- Young children
- People with weakened immune systems
- People with disabilities
- Pregnant and recently pregnant individuals

If you believe you may have a respiratory virus (if you feel sick or tested positive for one) and you have risk factors for severe illness, seek health care right away for testing and/or treatment.

If you test positive for the flu or COVID-19, treatment may be an option to make your symptoms less severe and shorten the time you are sick. Treatment should be started within a few days of when your symptoms begin.

Examples of respiratory virus symptoms include fever, chills, fatigue, cough, runny or stuffy nose, decrease in appetite, sore throat, vomiting, new loss of taste or smell, headache, muscle or body aches, diarrhea, and/or weakness.

Keep in mind:

- Washing hands and improving airflow in the places where people live and work are important to lowering risk from respiratory viruses.
- Effective treatments are available for those who get flu or COVID-19 and are recommended for those at higher risk for severe illness. Treatment can reduce severe illness, hospitalization, and death.
- You should seek emergency care if you have an emergency warning sign (like trouble breathing or chest pain), seek emergency medical care immediately.
- Everyday actions like masking and physical distancing can provide an additional layer of protection and can protect their family, friends, and co-workers.

Tests are available that can quickly detect these respiratory viruses.

For more information on respiratory viruses from KDHE visit www.kdhe.ks.gov/2108/Respiratory-Syncytial-Virus-RSV.

Sunflower and the bull calf

Our fall calving season has just wrapped up with another successful year that has now brought views of lively baby calves dotting our pasture.

Since our calving season usually falls within the same time as the start of our fall harvest, it is my responsibility to keep watch of the cattle in the pasture while my husband and father-in-law focus on harvest.

It's a task I have enjoyed ever since I was a kid when I'd keep watch on my cows and anticipate the arrival of little ones. I remember the excitement of riding the bus home from school to see a new wobbly calf in the pasture or the pride I had when a friend and I would sit behind the fence and be able to quietly watch a live birth.

I still have that feeling of anticipation to this day when I go out into the pasture in the mornings to see if there's new life. I also have that sense of pride as my son and I go out into the pasture and sit atop a hill looking over the cattle during our evening check knowing what I experienced and observed as a child is being passed down to my children.

I always hope for an uneventful calving season with mother cows not needing my assistance. Some years are better than others. This year none of the cows required my assistance, but it was definitely an eventful season, nonetheless.

My son's first bottle calf, Sunflower, has become a great cow and has proven to be an excellent mother over the last three seasons of calving. This year, my son and I discovered Sunflower and her new handsome red bull calf while checking the cattle one evening.

She had already cleaned up that little bull calf and he had figured out how to walk without wobbling and was nursing by the time my son and I found them. As we sat and watched the pair for a while, we commented on how this cow was a phenomenal mama even though she had been an orphan.

The next morning I went out again to check cattle but couldn't find that little red bull calf anywhere. Instead, Sunflower was nursing another calf — a petite black heifer.

I was a bit perplexed and amazed at the same time that Sunflower would allow a different calf to nurse, but I chalked it up to her being such a good mother. I also told myself that she had hid her red bull calf so well hidden in the tall grass that I couldn't find him, but I was sure I'd see him during my evening check.

But my son and I couldn't find that little red calf during our evening check. And Sunflower still had that little black heifer right beside her. I began to realize what was happening. Sunflower had twins. Scenarios ran through my mind. Perhaps she had only claimed the little heifer. Perhaps she hid the red bull calf and forgot where she'd left him. Perhaps coyotes had found him. In any of those scenarios, the outcome for that little bull calf was not promising.

The next morning my son and I awoke early to again go to the pasture and try to find that little red bull calf with no luck. I took the kids to school and returned to the pasture with our dog in the hopes we could find that baby.

The dog and I walked those 60 acres consisting of tall grass, thick timber and a creek bed. The dog sniffed out the little black heifer who'd been tucked into a tuft of grass, but we couldn't find the red bull calf.

Two days later there was still no sign of that little guy. Four days later and I'd given up hope.

Six days later, my husband and son went out during the evening check. I received a text from my husband telling me they'd found the missing red bull calf. I quickly called to see where they'd found him and to find out how badly decomposed he was.

"Oh, he's alive," my husband giggled. I couldn't believe it! When I got home later that evening I went out into the pasture to discover Sunflower with her two strong and healthy calves nursing.

That old cow surely gave us all a story to remember for a very long time and proof, once again, that she is an excellent mother.

PRAIRIE DOC - BY JILL KRUSE, DO

Prairie Doc or Prairie Bot?

Artificial Intelligence or A.I. has gone from Science Fiction to a reality. This technology continues to evolve and find new applications in the world, including the world of medicine. With any new advancement, there are pros and cons to be considered when implementing it into regular use, especially in medicine.

In 2023 the Journal of Medical Internet Research published an article where they had ChatGPT take 2 of the 3 USMLE exams. Step 1 is taken by third year medical students and all physicians must pass all three tests in order to become licensed as a physician. The program was given 4 different practice tests and scored between 44 to 64.4% correct. Over 60% is considered a passing score. The headlines read that ChatGPT passes medical boards.

While this headline was shocking, reading the article gives more nuances to that declaration. There were three different AI programs used, and only one had a passing score for one of the four sample tests, the easiest step 1. When the exams themselves were broken down, the AI was able to answer the "easy" questions with the greatest accuracy. Questions were graded on a score from 1 (easy) to 5 (difficult). However, it was unable to answer any of the level 5 questions. When the program was given a "hint", the performance increased to 22% correct of the level 5 questions. Students taking the test do not get hints.

For this article I decided to ask ChatGPT to list "5 ways AI will improve the practice of medicine in the next 5 years" and "5 ways AI may harm the practice of medicine in the next 5 years." Here is what the program came up with.

Here are the 5 ways ChatGPT thought AI could improve the practice of medicine

- Improved diagnostics and early detection
- Personalized treatment plans
- Efficient administrative workflows
- Virtual health assistants and remote monitoring
- Drug discovery and development

Here are the 5 ways ChatGPT thought AI could worsen the practice of medicine

- Over-reliance on AI
- Bias in algorithms
- Privacy and data security risks
- Job displacement and role redefinition
- Increasing costs for AI implementation

AI is a tool that can be used. Like any tool in medicine, it needs to be tested for safety, accuracy, and effectiveness before widespread implementation. While ChatGPT could easily write this entire article for me in a matter of seconds, it would not be providing you with the personal connection or with the level of reverence and responsibility that each Prairie Doc feels. We take our motto to provide you with health information that is based in science and built on trust very seriously. We will watch as this technology develops and advances. We embrace progress while holding fast to our prairie roots of connection and community. You do not need to worry about Prairie Doc being replaced by Prairie Bot.

POST ROCK EXTENSION DISTRICT

Planting wheat in dry conditions

By Sandra L. Wick
K-State Research and Extension Post Rock Crop Production Agent

It certainly seems that "Mother Nature" has shut the moisture off for north central Kansas! Even though fall harvest can continue, fields for wheat drilling are needing moisture. There is still plenty of time for drilling as the optimum planting time for wheat in northcentral Kansas is September 15 until October 20, so here are some options when drilling into dry conditions.

According to the most recent drought monitor map, most of our district is in the "moderate" drought category with not favorable precipitation in the near future.

The first option would be the "old school" saying of "dusting in" your wheat and your grain bins will bust! Simply plant at the normal seeding depth and the recommended planting dates. With this option, you are waiting for the moisture. According to studies at K-State Research and Extension, this may be the best option where soils are very dry. The seed will remain viable in the soil until it gets enough moisture for germination. According to the 10-day forecast, it predicts below-normal rainfall and higher than normal temperatures.

Planting deeper than usual can work also if the variety to be planted has a long coleoptile and there is good soil moisture within reach of the seed. The advantage of this option is that the crop should come up and make a stand during the optimum time in the fall. Even if you plant deep to get to moisture, and the coleoptile of the wheat variety is too short, it would germinate, but not emerge. If you would like a to know the coleoptile length of your wheat varieties, just give me a call if you are unsure. Generally, it's best to plant no deeper than 3 inches with most varieties in Kansas.

Frequently, if a rainfall occurs, crusting or stand failure happens, so producers may decide to wait until it has rained and soil moisture conditions are adequate before planting. It is recommended to increase your seeding rate about 10% each day after the optimum planting date and use a starter fertilizer along with a seed treatment. K-State Research and Extension studies have shown to use a maximum seeding rate of 120 lbs./A or calculate the seeding rate in seeds per acre. Be cautious with in-furrow nitrogen as the salt in the fertilizer can make it more difficult for the seed or the plant to absorb water for germination. When applying fertilizer with the seed, nitrogen rates should be limited to no more than 20 lbs./A to avoid potential toxicity to the seedling.

SPICE UP YOUR LIFE - LINDSAY YOUNG

If food waste makes you green, try this easy fresh pasta

This spinach pasta is made with only three ingredients, including fresh spinach, flour and salt. It is easy to make and can be paired with a variety of sauces.

One of the staples in our refrigerator is a package of fresh spinach.

We use it for everything—putting it on sandwiches or burgers, wilting it into omelets and using it as a taco topping.

Despite its constant use, there often comes a time where it starts to go just a bit bad. It still tastes good, but it doesn't look as nice, and it definitely loses that fresh crunch you're looking for when you eat it raw.

In the past, this led to unfortunate food waste, but after I watched a video online recently, I knew I finally had the solution for this sad, wilting mess: turning it into fresh pasta.

The recipe I found is super easy. It comes from Maya Leinenbach, a German influencer who posts under the account "fitgreenmind" on Instagram. She focuses on plant-based recipes. I didn't change the recipe because it was super simple, but I did determine the amounts and refine the directions for you.

Three-Ingredient Spinach Pasta

Ingredients

- 1 1/3 cup flour (I used bread flour)
- 1 cup fresh spinach
- large pinch salt

Directions

Add the flour, fresh spinach and salt to a food processor, and process until the mixture forms a dough. If it is too dry to come together, add a little more spinach. If it's too sticky to handle, add just a touch of flour.

Dump the dough onto a clean countertop and knead several times until the dough is smooth, and there are no more white streaks from the flour. Form it into a ball and leave it on the counter, under a bowl (so it doesn't dry out), until your pasta sauce is ready and it's time to boil the pasta.

To cook the pasta, fill a large pot with water and salt it liberally. Bring it to a boil.

Using a clean pair of kitchen shears, start snipping pieces of dough off the sides of the ball into the boiling water. Try to keep them about the same size. Mine were about one-fourth inch wide and one inch long. (Don't worry too much about making them look pretty.)

Boil for about three minutes. The pasta will float to the top of the water when it's done. Drain the pasta and add it to your sauce. Serve immediately.

This made about two nice-sized servings of pasta. The spinach taste was pretty mild, and depending on the sauce, you wouldn't even be able to tell it was there, outside of the color, so if you are trying to sneak more vegetables onto the table, this is a great way to do it.

It was really easy to make and made me feel like a real chef for just a moment. Also, I think you could shape this pasta a bit if you're not into the goofy shapes. I wish I could tell you about leftovers, but we finished it off right away, so I'm not sure, but based on the texture, I'm guessing it would reheat OK.

And now I have something to make the next time our spinach starts looking a little sad. It's a great option to keep food waste down while also enjoying a fabulous plate of pasta.

Farmers market quality at wholesale prices - Shop Kansas Farms attends Rural Grocery Summit

In our ongoing effort to support rural communities, Kansas Farm Bureau (KFB) and Shop Kansas Farms (SKF) recently sent Kylee Stout, KFB's business development manager, to the National Rural Grocery Institute Summit in Montgomery, Ala. Hosted by the Hunger Solutions Institute out of Auburn and the Rural Grocery Institute out of Kansas State University, the summit brought stakeholders from across the nation to showcase creative efforts to solve the challenge of rural grocery stores.

Stout learned that when rural grocery stores struggle or close, they often leave behind a food desert. A food desert is described as an area that has limited access to plentiful, affordable and/or nutritious food. An example would be a local gas station that offers food but very little of what they offer is nutritious.

"As we work with farmers, ranchers and growers in Kansas, we see the opportunity to connect those people who grow healthy food to the local grocery stores," Stout says. "That's not easy because grocery stores need dependable quantities and deliveries of the produce they can purchase at wholesale prices."

Stout shared that through work SKF and KFB are doing in Sumner County with the Border Queen Harvest Hub (BQHH), they're already seeing growth.

"Producers have come together to open their own storefronts where they sell on consignment," she says. "In our Border Queen Harvest Hub we've seen Ellis Island open in Belle Plaine and Hagar Acres in Caldwell. These stores offer fresh, nutritious and locally grown food to consumers."

Stout also shared some innovative ideas that were surfaced at the conference.

"I learned about one 24-hour grocery store where customers pay an annual membership fee of $75 and were given a key-code access to the store. You paid on the honor system, but there were security cameras and since each customer has a unique code, it's easier to know who is in the store and at what times."

She shared a benefit of this set up is there are no labor costs because the farmers stock the stores when they have the product and staff aren't needed to manage cash registers.

This model can be a win-win for customers and growers.

"Many consumers want a farmers market that is open every day but instead only have access to a big-box store or a gas station," Stout says. "Farmers are traditionally paid pennies on the dollar for their products, so it becomes a battle of offering high-quality food at an affordable price that consumers can afford, and farmers can make a living on."

As KFB and SKF work to support and prosper rural communities across our state, we place high priority on providing solutions that prosper local farmers, ranchers and growers who want to do direct-to-consumer sales and the consumers who want to purchase locally grown, healthy food. Those solutions require creativity and collaboration, which is something our people in rural Kansas know how to do well.

We invite you to look at the Rural Grocery Initiative. They offer many ways to get involved and can provide support to rural grocers through a nationwide network of resources.

Governor Kelly directs child care licensing and background check fees waived through 2025

Excess federal funds to cover fees associated with becoming a licensed child care provider or renewing an existing license

Governor Laura Kelly announced that the State of Kansas will cover the state licensing, background check, and fingerprinting fees for child care providers seeking initial licensure or licensure renewal through 2025 or until available funds are expended. Fee coverage will assist new child care providers by reducing start-up costs and continuing to support existing providers as they retain their licensure.

"I'm committed to expanding access to affordable, high-quality child care opportunities for Kansas children and families," Governor Laura Kelly said. "These funds allow for continued support for child care providers by removing financial barriers."

Since 2021, the State of Kansas has been covering the initial and renewal licensing fees for child care providers in the state through federal discretionary Child Care Development Fund (CCDF) assistance through federal pandemic relief legislation. Additional funding to extend this coverage is being provided through reallocated Governor Emergency Education Relief (GEER) funding. The funding will be administered through an agreement between the Kansas Children's Cabinet and Trust Fund and the Kansas Department of Health and Environment, the agency responsible for child care licensing.

"This additional funding, and Governor Kelly's commitment to directing it to child care licensing, will go a long way in allowing potential and current child care providers to continue the important work of creating and sustaining quality child care options for Kansas families," KDHE Secretary Janet Stanek said.

"The Kansas Children's Cabinet is happy to work collaboratively with KDHE Licensing to support child care providers across Kansas in all license categories by helping to offset the cost of being licensed in good standing," said Melissa Rooker, executive director of the Kansas Children's Cabinet and Trust Fund.

Covering these fees will lower the total start-up cost for child care businesses—costs that often become too large of a barrier to overcome. Additionally, this action will incentivize more unlicensed providers to become licensed, ensuring safer care based on industry best standards. For current providers, the decision to cover these fees is another way the Kelly administration has invested in Kansas' child care workforce and continues to provide them with critical support.

Local jurisdictions may charge fees unrelated to those imposed by the state. Providers should consult their local health departments or local resource and referral agencies to learn more about applicable local fees in their jurisdiction.

Herington Hero Award and asked him how it felt to be the next Herington Hero. He responded by saying, "Well it's a shock, it's a surprise, but it's a true blessing. I don't really think I deserve it, but I think it's very sweet that someone nominated me. I just like to bless as many people as I can, as often as I can!"

"Every nomination received at our office is deserving of an award. Giving time and energy to others is a selfless act. It comes naturally to some, and others are inspired by people, like Ryan and the other heroes, who have been nominated. It is our hope that the Herington Hero Award is doing just that; inspiring others to give back in whatever way they can to this great town," said Shannon Walters, Supervisor of Home Health and Hospice in the Herington office.

Batchman, the son of the late Bob and Charlene Batchman, spent several years teaching at USD 299 before moving to Herington.

of the first settlements in what would become Lincoln County. The first settlers arrived in 1869, and nearly all of them lost their lives in an Indian raid in May of that year. Many Denmark area residents are descendants of those early settlers, four and five generations later.

The Denmark Church was built in 1878. The beautifully simple church has withstood the test of time, services being held there even today. The bell tower and south entry were added in 1901. The Lutheran cross, carved of native limestone, first stood on the roof over the doorway. In 1901 when the tower and entry were added, the heavy cross was removed. It now stands to the east of the church on a memorial to the early pioneers who built the church.

The centennial brochure tells that the decision to build the church was reached in the fall of 1875. The building was to measure 46-and-a-half feet x 26 feet, to be constructed of native stone with a shingle roof, on a site located on the summit of a "gentle rise of ground" located on the homestead of Lars P. Nielsen, who donated the ground. The deed was recorded May 3, 1880.

Stone quarrying was done in the community from the Niels Andersen farm, the sand from the farm owned by Clarence Lessor. The lumber came from Ellsworth, a distance of 35 miles. Later, the bell tower rock came from the land of Bob Nelson.

The community hall was built nearby in 1911 and is now home to many community activities including an annual pheasant hunter's lunch. The residents work at keeping their culture alive by featuring Danish dishes and following Danish customs.

The Denmark Preservation Foundation is committed to the preservation and restoration of architecturally and historically significant structures in the Denmark area, many of which are Kansas Post-Rock Limestone. They work to fund and oversee projects in the Denmark, Kansas area that preserve history and create opportunities for the future of the region.

The preservation process is an ongoing endeavor, and the foundation has many projects in the works. The first project was erecting a memorial to commemorate an early Denmark settler killed in an Indian raid in the late 1800s. That project was completed in 2019 and has become a landmark in our area. We are now working to renovate the historic Andreson Building, of which two units will be converted into a cultural center and museum celebrating Denmark's history between the 1860s and 1910s. Those two units are currently under renovation and will be finished soon.
